

The pod begins to PULSE. A buzzing sound grows louder and louder. The pod starts to VIBRATE intensely.

5. 4. 3. 2. 1... The pod shuts down. Thomas' lifeless body lies inside. Nothing happens for a moment, until the control panel screen flashes "SUCCESS" and the pod BEEPS repeatedly.

Jerry pumps his fist in celebration.

JERRY

Yes!

INT. UNKNOWN - THOMAS' POV

Blackness. Eyes open. It's bright. Everything is blurry, split in two. We hear fuzzy, unintelligible MURMURING masked by a high pitched RING.

Blink... Blink... With each blink, everything is clearer. The ringing slowly fades. The chatter becomes comprehensible.

We can now tell that he's in a pod. Just like the one he entered. PSSHHH. It opens.

INT. REFLEX HEADQUARTERS - DAY

Rex lies in the pod. But this isn't Rex. Thomas has made it out to Rex's body. He shields his eyes, squinting.

A REFLEX EMPLOYEE chuckles as he watches. He looks too young for his job. Maybe 23. Bull cut. A thin mustache he probably shouldn't have grown out. Thomas groans as he gets up.

REFLEX WORKER

Still getting those post-transfer headaches, huh Boss?

Thomas turns, caught off guard. He didn't notice the worker.

THOMAS

Uh, yeah. How long do these last?

REFLEX WORKER

You tell me, boss. You're the only one who knows.

THOMAS

You mean I'm the only one who's gone in the Mirror?

REFLEX WORKER

Uh, yeah. Are you okay, boss?

THOMAS

Yeah. I'm fine... Am I your boss?
Or do you just call everyone that?

REFLEX WORKER

I mean technically you are my boss.
But I don't mean it like that,
Boss... You don't remember me?

THOMAS

No- I mean, yes. Of course I do.

REFLEX WORKER

You sure? I can look into that neural transfer and make sure no memories slipped away.

THOMAS

No, please don't. That's not necessary.

REFLEX WORKER

Sure thing, Boss.

Thomas looks around for the first time. He's in a spacious office. TVs mounted side-by-side on the wall display various graphs and metrics. Thomas notices Rex's phone on the desk beside him. He grabs it and puts it in his pocket.

Thomas notices a plaque on the door that reads: Rex Harrington - Chief Technology Officer. He heads for the exit.

REFLEX WORKER (CONT'D)

Hey, don't forget your glasses.

The worker holds up Rex's glasses.

THOMAS

Oh, yeah. Thanks.

REFLEX WORKER

No problem. Take it easy, boss.

Thomas stumbles out of the office, still unable to balance properly. The worker watches him leave, confused.

INT. REFLEX ATRIUM - CONTINUOUS

Thomas stumbles out onto a top-floor glass deck, overlooking a MASSIVE atrium with a large, spherical glass ceiling. It's breathtaking. Vibrant. Strangely idyllic.

Carefully selected, systematically placed trees create a precise gradient between the fifty-two floors. Each floor has its own species of tree with uniquely pigmented leaves. Rex's floor is adorned with Blood-red Japanese maple trees.

Birds chirp, flying between trees. Drones deliver coffee between floors. Thomas stands there, astonished by the incredible view. He can't look away. It's hypnotizing.

Two skinny tinted-glass bridges stretch across each floor, overlapping to create an X-shape. The bridge tints match the tree color of their respective levels. A clear, tubular elevator pierces the center of each X-bridge.

He shifts his gaze upward and notices a smaller floor, far above Rex's. It's just below the crown of the glass dome, spanning across the entire area. Its undersurface isn't translucent like the other floors. It's a mirror, reflecting the entire office below. In the center, there's a dark-tinted inner circle where the elevator connects. From below, it's like a pupil, making the floor resemble an eye. An evil eye.

Thomas carefully steps onto the bridge ahead. One step after the next, he begins to walk across.

INT. OCULUS - CONTINUOUS - BIRD'S EYE VIEW

We see Thomas hike across the lengthy bridge from above. From the eye.

INT. REFLEX ATRIUM - CONTINUOUS

Thomas reaches the other side of Rex's floor. New-age melodies radiate from a dark, doorless room. Thomas enters.

DEEP VOICE

Do you mind?

Thomas JUMPS, startled by the voice. He turns around and sees a BALD MAN wearing bright green Crocs. He sits criss-crossed on a quilt, meditating.

THOMAS

Um, sorry.

BALD MAN

Yeah, whatever. Just go.

The man begins to HUMMMMM to himself. Thomas exits the room. He reads the plaque beside it: Meditation Room.